DAY CONFESSED TO MAKING STILL

Miss Sara Monday, federal court clerk here, returned Friday night from Frankfort where she has been attending federal court this week. She reports that Wm. Day, young man of Winchester, who formerly worked here, confessed to having a moonshine still in his home and was given three months in jail and a fine of $200. Day told Judge Cochran that he made one just to see if he could. He admitted, however, in answer to the Judge's question, that he had sold some.

Frank T. Kahn, watchman at the Eminence distillery, accused by negroes, who confessed to breaking in that he signaled them with a lantern that the way was clear, was found guilty in federal court and sentenced to serve six months in jail and pay a fine of $200.

James Graves, Will Henry McGinnis, and Charles Johnson were sentenced to six months in jail and fined $200, and Jasper Raiser, a white man, and George Miles were given three months and $200 each.
